Manhunt, closure of Yolo Causeway:

Engine repair shop's early shift gets shot at

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A regional crime drama that included a huge manhunt and the six-hour closure of a major local freeway got its start when some employees of a West Sacramento repair shop arrived at work just before 6 a.m. on Friday.

B & R Head & Block Repair is a "family business," reported Dieter Kutsch, a member of the family that runs it. The shop services big engine parts for a wide area around West Sacramento, and it's located on an industrial stretch of Harbor Boulevard north of the freeway, where there isn't a lot going on outside daylight hours.

Kutsch's son, Dieter Kutsch, Jr., opened the door that morning for two employees, Keith and Robert. "He turned the alarm system off for the guys, and the other two went in, while he went to get coffee. They walked toward the back, hitting the lights. It was still dark inside."

They made a turn and started heading back on the other side of the building.

"There were lights upstairs," said Dieter Kutsch, Sr. "Robert yelled 'what's going on?' At that time, the shooter opened the door and started shooting at Keith and Robert. He shot three rounds at first. The guys went down onto the ground. They weren't hit."

The suspect — later ID'd as 38-year old Jimmy Lee Graves of Dieppe Way, Sacramento — had a revolver with him. Kutsch's employees were pinned down, but they had some cover from posts and engine parts inside the building.

The pair hurriedly talked to each other and agreed to make a break for it, one at a time. They did -- and the gunman shot at them again.

"They ran out (of the building) and at that time, Robert called 911 and then he called me," said Kutsch. "They also wanted to contact my son, so he wouldn't go back into the building not knowing what was going on."

Kutsch's son didn't get the message — and he returned to the building to enter it evidently just as the shooter went out a window elsewhere.

Police arrived, not sure whether all the suspects were out of the building. They used tear gas to make sure it was clear. They established a perimeter, but the shooter was gone.

Graves allegedly took a Remington rifle with a scope from the shop — but dropped it nearby.

"I had my gun there because I had been hunting the previous day," said Kutsch.

Why the break-in? "It was a random deal," said Kutsch. "There was no money in the shop, all our business is through accounts."

Then, at 6:39 a.m., police received a phone call from near a liquor store at Poplar Avenue and West Capitol: the caller reported that a man in a long coat, with a gun, had just carjacked a brown Ford Focus.

Police spotted the vehicle and pursued at high speed. The suspect bailed on foot on the 2900-block of West Capitol, and then carjacked a white Ford F-150 pickup.

"Officers confronted the suspect, ordering him to surrender, and were fired on by the suspect," reported Sgt. Nathan Steele of the West Sacramento Police Department.

The pickup fled west, shooting again at an officer and ramming a patrol car on West Capitol, causing the officer driving it to lose control. Then the pickup got on I-80 westbound, losing control and hitting a center divider. Law enforcement personnel set up a perimeter around this Yolo Causeway site — and entirely shut down traffic on the causeway.

The freeway wasn't reopened until after noon. The closure by then had caused major Sacramento-area traffic trouble. Before stopped traffic was allowed to pass, vehicles were inspected by officers to make sure the suspect wasn't hiding inside.

At this point, there were several law enforcement agencies involved — including SWAT teams, K-9 teams and helicopters, said Steele. The manhunt eventually grew to involve 12 agencies.

Now there were two "active crime scenes" — but a call came in at about 10 a.m. that there had been another carjacking, near County Road 127 and River Road. Yolo sheriff's deputies responded, learning that somebody in a suspected-stolen tractor had approached a male victim and struck him over the head. The victim's vehicle — a 2008 Ford F-150 — was taken. The victim was said, in some media reports, to have been a birdwatcher. He wasn't seriously injured.

That victim's pickup was later found abandoned near Lenwick and Morse Avenue in Sacramento, said Steele.

Investigators followed leads, checking on "numerous potential suspect locations."

At about 6:55 p.m., the Sacramento sheriff's department checked out one of those locations, an apartment at 1968 Ethan Way.

"While attempting to secure the scene in the 1900 block of Ethan Way a suspect fled from Sacramento County Deputies, barricaded himself and started a fire in the apartment," reported Steele in a press release. "After a standoff in which the suspect was repeatedly ordered to surrender, the suspect was shot by Sacramento

William Lee Graves:

Sacramento after allegedly starting a fire, refusing to surrender

County deputies to allow for emergency personnel to extinguish the rapidly growing fire."

Graves was killed.

Steele declined to discuss whether the suspect had a criminal history.

The Sacramento Bee reported that family members said the man had trouble holding a job, as well as drug problems, a failing marriage, and pending charges on a robbery.

(Editor's note: the News-Ledger covered some of the major developments in this case shortly after they occurred, on its websites at www.WestSac.com and www.News-Ledger.com.)

West Sacramento's Fire Boat 41 gave a tow to a boater in need on the evening of April 17. The sailboat owner said he did not have any water to drink and hadn't eaten in three days, reports the city fire department. He told local media all his belongings were on board the 20-foot boat, and he had been afraid to go ashore and leave it. Firefighters attended to him and towed his boat upstream to be secured.

River City senior is heading to Annapolis

By Sam Urrea

Kai Hinton is a big step closer to fulfilling his lifelong dream of becoming a naval aviator: the River City High School senior has been accepted into the United States Naval Academy.

An overachieving student and athlete for as long as he can remember, Kai has been chasing this goal from as early as age five.

"I used to visit my grandma in Hawaii when I was very little and I would spend hours reading naval history books and documentaries. Then, as I got older, I grew more and more interested in joining the navy. I wanted to commit forever," said Kai.

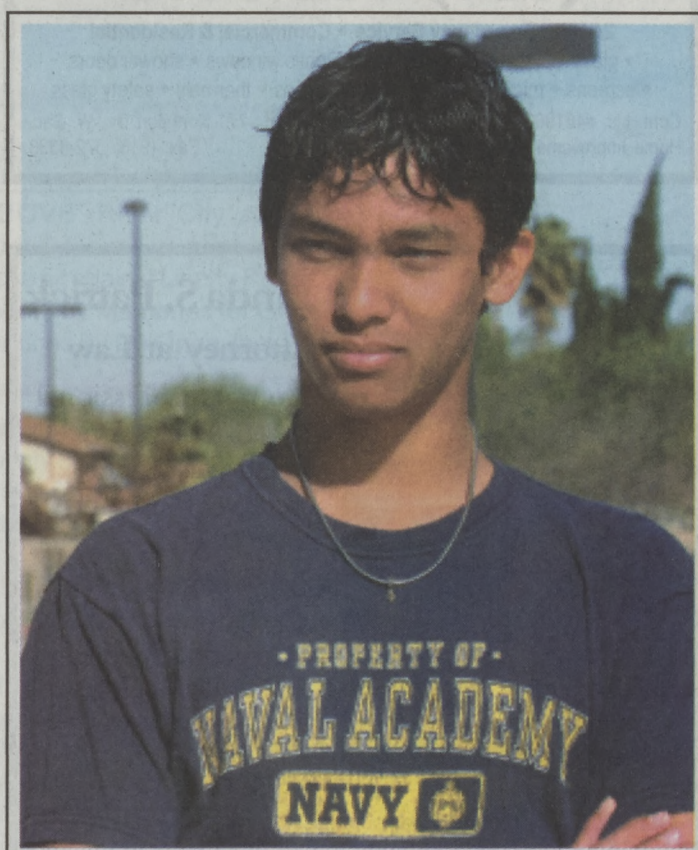

Acceptance into the Naval Academy is no shoe-in. According to parchment.com, an educational data website, the number of applicants every year varies from 10,000 to 20,000, with an average admission rate of only 8.4

percent in 2010. An applicant must have a G.P.A. of at least 3.5, must be in the top 10% of his or her class, and must score at least 2100 on the SAT's -- at a minimum.

Participating in a sport and doing exceptionally well at it are essential. Performing community service and pursuing other extracurricular activities are not mandatory, but highly increase the chances of admission.

Kai met all of these requisites. He also obtained a required official nomination from a state representative -- a long, difficult process to complete, Kai reports.

"I needed a total of three acceptance letters. Once I received my first letter, the second one had to be nominated and approved by a congressman. Congressman Mike Thompson was in charge of doing that, and once that was completed, I received my last letter confirmed my admittance into the academy!" he said.

With that letter, his ambitious goal was finally met.

Relatives from all over the country, including some who Kai claims he has rarely spoken to, called to congratulate him on his amazing achievement. His closer family members were nothing short of ecstatic.

Kai's current Spanish teacher, David Ionescu, was not surprised by his student's triumph. He said, "I've had Kai for three years and I was not surprised at all. He understands concepts before I even start teaching them. He is always one step ahead of the game."

Kai himself was pretty confident. "I was positive. You know, there is always that doubt of not getting in because so few people get admitted but I believed in my abilities. I have done track my whole high school career and excelled, maintained a high G.P.A. and done community service."

He does not live by any mottos, but his advice for other students is to challenge themselves and commit to something they really like, not just if it's the military, but for whatever goal they pursue. He said, "Make sure you know what you truly want, and commit yourself to it."

With senior year coming to an end, most students will be looking forward to getting their high school diplomas and enjoying their summer vacation until the subsequent year approaches. Kai, however, is wasting no time moving forward with his life. Life at the academy, located in Annapolis, Maryland, starts in June. He will have roughly two weeks after his graduation to prepare himself to start life as a "plebe" — an incoming freshman at the high-pressure academy.

Graduates of the academy become commissioned officers in the Navy.

Mice: sometimes, they just want to be friends

As you may recall, last week I used this space to talk about an encounter one of my friends had with some noisy mice that were happily living their nasty lives up in her attic. Needless to say, she got herself some mouse traps, baited them with extra-crunchy peanut butter, and by the next morning, at least two of them were in mouse heaven. Well, much to my surprise, I have received numerous comments on that column and it would appear that most everyone has a mouse story of their own to share. In fact, I have learned that some mice are apparently as large as rats (at least in the eye of the beholder), others roam in aggressive packs and will bite you if you're not careful, and that in at least one case, an unwanted mouse just wanted to be friends – which brings me to my little story.

"My husband used to work the swing shift," explained a friend of mine who was determined to tell me her mouse story, "and he usually didn't get home until about midnight. But I liked to stay up just so we could discuss our days and spend a little time together before we went to bed. Well, on this particular night, while I was waiting for my husband to come home, I was sitting at my computer doing some of the bills when I suddenly thought I glimpsed some movement out of the corner of my eye. But when I looked more carefully, I couldn't see anything, so back to my bills I went. But when it happened again, I could clearly see a mouse scampering from one side of the room to another. So I made a mental note to get some mouse traps and to tell my husband what had happened, since if a man is good for anything, it's putting out and emptying mouse traps.

"Anyway, doing the bills takes quite a bit of concentration and before I knew it, I had forgotten all about the mouse, only to suddenly have it run right across my bare feet. Of course I completely flipped out and nearly broke both of my legs trying to get them out from underneath the computer desk. I also stubbed my big toe so badly that I thought it was broken, too. So I leaped to my feet as best I could and hobbled off after a broom, determined to beat the snot out of that mouse! Well, no sooner I had found him than he somehow managed to dart right up one of my pants legs, using my throbbing big toe as a springboard. I of course started to scream, and the very minute I did, my husband gets home from work and thinks the house is being robbed and I am in a life and death struggle with the thief. But at least when I ran over to my husband and jumped into his arms, the mouse fell out of my pants and went racing for safety. And when my husband finally stopped laughing, he just shook his head like he often does when he thinks I have lost my mind, returned me safely to the floor, and went into the TV room to watch one of those stupid old John Wayne movie videos that he says make him relax enough after work to be able to sleep.

"So, after getting assurances from my husband that he would get some mouse traps the next day, back to my bills I went, only to hear him calling as quietly as he could for me to come into the TV room. And you're not going to believe this, but when I got there, that stupid mouse was not only back, but it was happily perched on my husband's knee and my husband was smiling at it. And then he even started talking to it, saying stuff like 'Did that big bad lady scare you?' and 'You sure are a cute little fellow – you look just like Jerry'.

"Just what in the world are you doing?" I demanded to know while looking around for something heavy to throw at the mouse. "And who in the hell is Jerry?"

"You know," said my husband as he slowly reached out to try and pet the mouse, "Jerry from the Tom and Jerry cartoons. That was my favorite cartoon when I was growing up and he looks just like Jerry."

"Please," I begged my husband, "don't pet that mouse. It could be rabid for all you know. And I'm going to bed!"

"Well, he must have played with Jerry for a good half-hour before he finally came to bed, and we weren't in bed together for more than ten minutes when my husband's new friend ran right across my arm and jumped into my hair, which was really long back then. And believe me, there is nothing in this whole world that will freak me out more than having something alive and moving around in my hair! So, after screaming hysterically and violently shaking my head until I somehow got the mouse out of my hair, my husband reluctantly agreed that Jerry had to go, no matter how cute and friendly he was. And although he never told me exactly how he went about doing it, Jerry never came back again."

"So how come you never asked him how he had he gotten rid of Jerry?" I asked with interest.

"Because he really liked that stupid mouse and I was afraid it would end up being just like that scene in The Searchers where John Wayne sees what the Comanches did to a white woman and tells a relative of hers, 'What do you want me to do? Draw you a picture? Spell it out? Don't ever ask me! For as long as you live, don't ever ask me more!'"

On April 17, the River City High School swim team held its final home match of the season -- a double-meet with visiting Vista del Lago and Union Mine high schools.

An RCHS boys team of Chris Irish, Jeret Tiller, Johnathan Keilman and Sterling Liffing set a school record while winning the 200 medley relay, and the Raiders' Keilman also set a school record while winning the 100-yard butterfly.

The season culminates with the conference championships this weekend and sectionals in May.

Biting dog sought

The animal services division of the Yolo County sheriff's department is looking for a dog involved in a biting incident on April 15 in West Sacramento. The sheriff's office reports that a female victim was sitting on her porch on the 1600 block of Madrone Avenue at about 5 p.m. when a "golden retriever"-type dog came around the corner of the house and attacked, before running off towards Westacre Road. A search didn't turn up the dog. Typically, a dog involved in a bite needs to be checked for rabies so that the victim doesn't have to undergo unnecessary and painful rabies treatment. The sheriff's office added that allowing a dog to run unattended is a misdemeanor, and the animal services division plans to increase its enforcement with a "zero tolerance" program for owners. At the same time the sheriff's office announced it was looking for the West Sacramento dog, it reported it was also seeking dogs involved in several biting attacks in Woodland and Davis. Anyone with information on the involved dogs or their owners is asked to call (530) 668-5287 (24 hours/day) or email animal.bite@yolocounty.org.

NEWS-LEDGER EDITORIAL:

Crime drama & more

Friday's crime drama caught the region's attention. Apparently, a lone gunman shot at West Sacramento citizens and police, rammed a patrol car, caused at least one other car crash. He carjacked several vehicles, beat up a birdwatcher, and eventually was cornered in a Sacramento apartment, where he refused to surrender.

Finally, the suspect was shot and killed by deputies.

Amid all that action, there were certainly a lot of chances for other people to get killed or badly hurt, but none were. It sure could have been a lot worse.

Meanwhile, it will be interesting to watch the actions of law enforcement be dissected and analyzed — the length of time they kept I-80 closed for public safety, the final decision to shoot, and so forth. There will be lessons to learn for next time.

■ ■ ■

When the River City High School football team had a breakout season a couple of years ago, winning nearly every regular-season game and making it to the playoffs for the first time in what seemed like forever, West Sacramento got excited.

The community paid attention to the winning season, and the city council even presented the team with a proclamation.

This year, the school's girls' basketball team had its own breakout season, going 27-4 overall after a near-perfect regular season. They earned their first trip to the playoffs ever.

They deserve a city council plaque, don't you think?

No more capital "I" in internet.

As one more tiny sign of a new era, the News-Ledger is going to try to make a slight change in the spelling of the word "internet" — no longer capitalizing the word like just about everybody did when the darn thing was invented.

And if it seems odd to you that the word ever was capitalized in regular use, just consider that this is a common thing with big new technologies. When that exciting and groundbreaking technology called "Radio" was invented, it also originally came with a capital "R." Only after people got used to the idea did the "R" shrink.

So spelling the word as "internet" is pretty much an admission it's been around a while and we're used to it.

In loving memory of

Louise Anne Marie Carroll

November 5, 1916 – April 16, 2012

It is with sadness the family of Louise Carroll announce her peaceful passing on Monday, April 16, 2012 at the age of 95 years.

Mrs. Carroll, beloved mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother was a pleasant, self-reliant, honest, and kind woman. She was born and raised on a farm near Zurich, Ontario Canada, the sixth of eleven children and the daughter of Arthur and Anna (Plante) Sreenan. In 1937, in the waning days of the great depression, she moved to Detroit, Michigan working first as a domestic then as a factory worker in a converted automobile assembly plant fabricating armaments during World War II. She became a US citizen in February, 1943. She met Detroit native John Wendell Carroll in the late 1940s and they married in 1950. As a US Air Force lieutenant's wife, she began a nomadic life taking her to Delaware, Texas, Ohio, New Mexico, and finally San Diego, where they settled in 1961. During this time, Louise gave birth to four children. Mrs. Carroll remained in San Diego until 1999, when she moved to the newly opened Margaret McDowell Manor in West Sacramento.

Louise is survived by sisters Patsy Rau and Jeanne O'Brien of Ontario, her daughter, Paulette Green of South Lyon, Michigan, and sons Curtis of West Sacramento, John of San Diego, and Douglas of Longview, Washington; grandson Jason and granddaughters Jaime, Janelle, Tracy and Marcia and five great-grandchildren. She is preceded in death by her husband and daughter Suzanne.

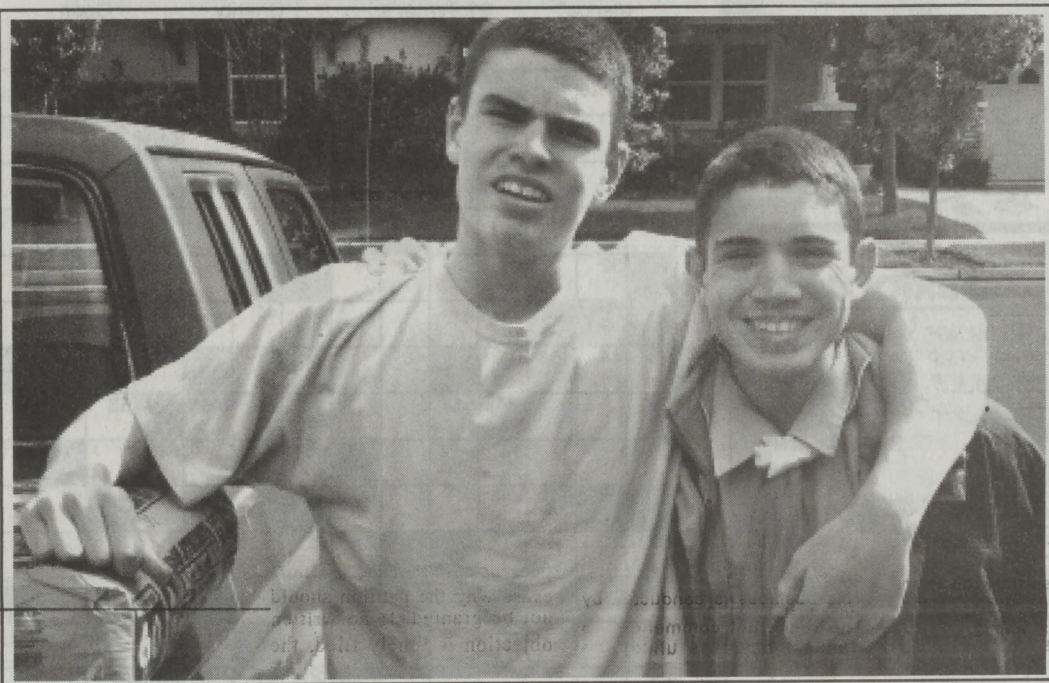

The family welcomes you to join them for a memorial service at Our Lady of Grace Church, 911 Park Boulevard, West Sacramento at 2:00 on Saturday, April 28th, 2012. The family would also like to acknowledge and express their appreciation to Dave, Mary, Dana and Dean Sbarbaro, and the wonderful staff at Grand River Villa, and Sue Tarleton of Margaret McDowell Manor, both in West Sacramento.

Brothers finish 'Eagle Scout' projects

Two West Sacramento brothers completed their Eagle Scout community service projects this month. Joel and Darren Kersey each assembled a group of volunteers and planned and directed a work project at a park in Sacramento.

Joel is a sophomore at River City High School, and Darren is a student at Southport Elementary. Both are "Life Scouts" and members of Boy Scout Troop 43 of the Golden Empire Council in West Sacramento.

Joel organized and supervised volunteers in repairing and rehabbing several tables in the park.

ABOVE: JOEL and DARREN KERSEY, West Sacramento boys who have completed the culminating event in earning 'Eagle Scout' status

Darren planned and directed the pouring of a new concrete pad, construction of a masonry hot ash box, and installation of a new grill at the park.

Besides the volunteers, the projects received support from a number of sponsors who provided materials.

The projects are a requirement for the boys to earn the rank of Eagle Scout — highest rank of the Boy Scouts of America.

GO FIGURE! by Linda Thistle

COUCH THEATER DVD PREVIEWS

BY SAM STRUCKHOFF

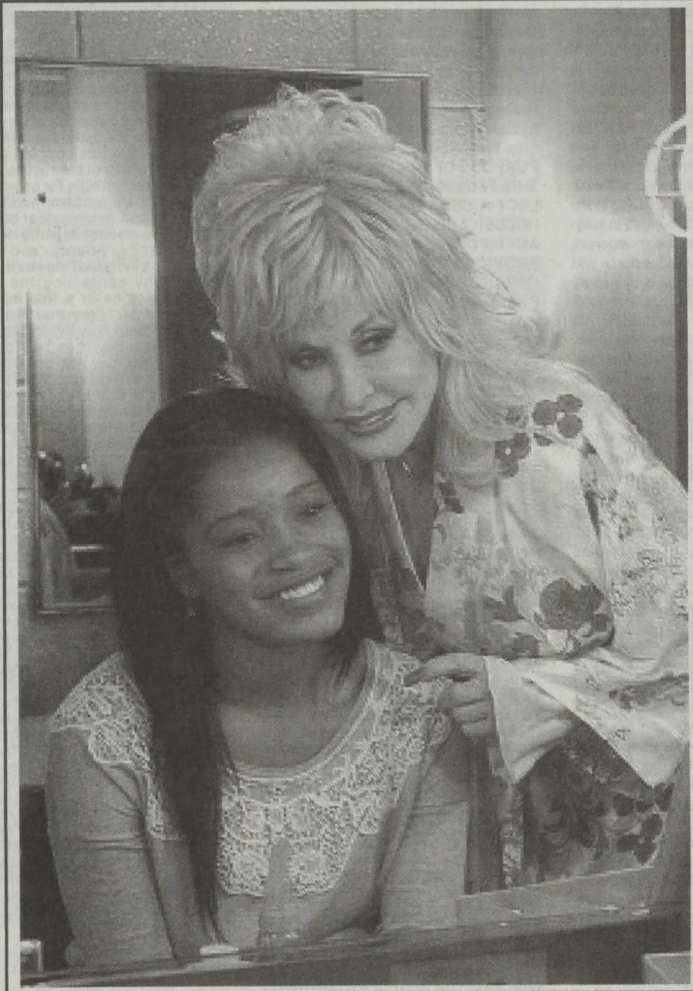

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Joyful Noise" (PG-13) -- Dolly Parton and Queen Latifah go head to head in this high-volume shipment of cheese and song. Vi (Latifah) is the director of a small-town church choir with dreams of winning the National Joyful Noise Competition. Choir veteran G.G. (Parton) thinks it's time the whole choir thing should go "Sister Act 2" and get a new style. Soon, G.G.'s talented bad-boy grandson (Jeremy Jordan) and Vi's talented-choirgirl daughter (Keke Palmer) start getting too close.

For those who cannot digest TV's "Glee," steer wide and clear of this one. The songs can be catchy and impressive and even a little uplifting. It's the script and the vacant humor that knock this one off key.

"Haywire" (R) -- Somebody at the big, morally ambiguous spy office sure goofed again, because another trained killer has "gone rogue" after a failed backstabbing. This time it's Gina Carano, a mixed-martial arts fighter trying on her first movie role as Mallory Kane, an assassin bent on getting revenge on those who betrayed her. The story is familiar, but well-executed.

Director Steven Soderbergh utilizes his female lead well. You can tell it's her in the action sequences, and when she's not fighting, she's surrounded by more experienced actors. Carano makes a great action hero because you believe she really could do that move where she strangles a hitman with her legs while twisting his arm.

"Kinyarwanda" -- In this drama, different stories are woven together to give a multidimensional perspective on the massacre in Rwanda in 1994. The characters include a young couple and their son -- all three are in danger because the parents are from different ethnic groups. This, however, isn't a story about survival, but of the issues involved before, during and after the genocide.

DOG OF THE WEEK
"New Year's Eve" (PG-13)

-- What happens when you pack as many stars as you can fit into a romantic comedy set around one day? An unlovable lump of cameos and an annoying ad campaign where it's obvious that many of the stars couldn't be paid to do a promo shot. This movie is the toxic runoff created by overpressured mediocrity. It's the fruitcake of film; a dense, unwanted amalgamation of unused tidbits that forces its way into our lives around the holidays.

It stars Hilary Swank, Robert De Niro and a ton of other people who don't mind being left off the list. Each cluster of stars forms its own little love story that is somehow vaguely connected to the other vignettes. In the end, all the half-baked stories come to a big undeserved climax that unconvincingly demands that you experience tender emotions.

Autobiographies face a challenge when it comes to believability, because they depend upon self-analysis, and it's hard to say how authentic someone is in examining his or her own motives.

But Shaquille O'Neal's "Shaq Uncut" is pretty spot-on when it comes to evaluating the NBA center's 19-year pro career.

For comparison, take Bill Simmons' "The Book of Basketball," considered to be a pretty perceptive look at the NBA. Simmons ranked O'Neal just outside the top 10 players of all time and stated: "Basketball was never as much fun for Shaq as everything else in his life ... he happily settled for ... some top-five records, three Finals MVPs and a fantastically fun ride."

In "Shaq Uncut," O'Neal wrote, "Although I love the game of basketball, I've never wanted that to be the only thing that defines me." He also summed up his legacy as "I was generous, I was dominant, I was unique."

Successful autobiographies also satiate the reader's interest in the author's perception of those with whom he interacted.

O'Neal does not disappoint on this front. Most basketball fans will enjoy O'Neal's take on a number of NBA stars he played with and against, including Dwyane Wade, LeBron James, Penny Hardaway, Dwight Howard, Yao Ming and Tim Duncan. Many words are utilized to lay out the complicated relationship between O'Neal and Kobe Bryant.

O'Neal lauds Bill Russell and Jerry West, and throws some elbows at Pat Riley, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Bill Walton.

Perhaps the best insight, however, comes from his statement that before he turned 25, he was "a basketball star, a rapper, a movie star and an endorsement king." That's about as accurate a picture of the modern, multiplatform star athlete as one can ask for.

Go Nuts for Almonds

Of all the things to love about almonds, this one should really get your heart pumping: Just a handful of almonds a day could help maintain healthy cholesterol levels. That's good news for just about everyone, as cardiovascular disease holds its spot as the leading cause of death among men and women in the U.S. Research shows that a diet high in heart-healthy foods like almonds can reduce cholesterol levels as much as statin drugs like lovastatin and mevastatin.

Almonds also are one of the richest sources of vitamin E, a powerful antioxidant that helps to reduce the risk of cancer and heart disease. A study published in the June 2005 Journal of Nutrition showed that consuming whole almonds, including the skin, doubles the antioxidant intake.

Just 1 ounce (22 almonds) packs more protein than an egg and more than 3 grams of dietary fiber. This same portion of almonds provides about 160 calories and the high protein content staves off hunger. Almonds also are a rich source of riboflavin, magnesium, manganese and copper.

Shelled almonds may be whole, sliced or slivered with skin on, or blanched with the skin removed. Look for dry-roasted almonds that contain no additional ingredients like sugar or preservatives. Store them in a tightly sealed container in a cool, dry place to prevent them from going rancid and absorbing odors of other foods. Almonds will last several months in the refrigerator and up to a year frozen.

This heart-healthy recipe for Savory Almond and Cheese Straws makes an excellent snack and is a great way to incorporate almonds into your diet.

SAVORY ALMOND AND CHEESE STRAWS

1 pound puff pastry dough
1 egg, beaten with 1 teaspoon water
3/4 cup grated dry cheese, such as Parmesan or aged Gouda
3/4 cup almonds, chopped
Flour for dusting

1. Thaw pastry overnight in refrigerator or 40 minutes at room temperature. Unfold pastry sheets on a lightly floured surface. With the shorter side facing you, roll out each sheet to 12 by 12 inches. Cut each sheet in half, lengthwise.
2. Brush dough with egg mix and sprinkle with an even coating of cheese and almonds. With a rolling pin, lightly press the mixture into the dough. Cut each half crosswise into 3/4-inch strips. Place on parchment-lined baking sheets and refrigerate for 30 minutes before baking.

3. Bake at 400 F, 9 to 10 minutes, or until light brown and crisp. Makes about 96 straws.
